McLellans on Florida Outing

to Havana or Tampa, as the spirit moves him. A ride through Hyde Park, the 'quality avenue of Tampa,' out along the Bay shore passing homes of moderate and more moderate taste, "counter marching" the Bay shore ride to cross over to West Tampa, and Ybor city, both suburbs of the larger city and populated by foreigners. The making of cigars, with factories for manufacture and houses for homes of the employees, make street after street a sort of bee hive feature. Some very elaborate buildings, works of art in architecture, our driver pointed out as the Cuban Clubs, Spanish and Italian Clubs, and one formerly a German Club, now called Labor Club, made food for thought, and proved the necessity to make America truly American or take the consequences. Out to the ship yards, but not able to see the launching which occurred that day.

"On to Sulphur Spring where a pool of deep, dark water makes a place for only experts to swim as no bottom has ever been sounded.

The sign 'To the Alligator Farm,' was in sight but the attraction was not sufficient, our good driver assured us, to warrant the time to see it. Some 'Orange Crush,' proved a refreshing drink and distinctive of this part of the country. Back by way of a large orange and grape fruit grove, of which Tampa boasts as her largest grove, past many attractive bungalows, and near bungalows, not neglecting to mention the Maxfield Parish colors in the wonderful begonia vine, which just now is in cadmium bright in many instances, the tall hibiscus, and the greens of a hundred shades, we reached the boat landing in good time.

"The return trip was made almost too quickly, and the pier of St. Petersburg was in sight almost before we knew it.

"There can be but one verdict concerning the trip that day and our only regret, that all we can send to our friends in the frozen north is an account in words too feeble to portray the wonders of summertime in wintertime."
